

Your referral to The Royal Wolverhampton NHS Trust

Gynaecology Oncology Patient Information Leaflet

Introduction

Your treatment involves specialist care and therefore we have referred you to New Cross Hospital as this is a specialist centre for gynaecology. We understand that it can be difficult and worrying to have to go to a different hospital for treatment and we hope this leaflet will answer some of your questions.

Why do I have to be transferred for treatment?

National NHS guidelines recommend that some types of surgery should be performed by appropriate treatment centres where they have specialist staff to support you . They have specialist staff at New Cross Hospital for the surgery that you need.

The gynaecology multidisciplinary teams at both hospitals work closely together. After surgery, you may have appointments at New Cross Hospital or at The Dudley Group, as appropriate.

At these appointments, you may be given new information so we recommend bringing someone with you to all your appointments, for example a family member or friend. .

Will I still have the same key worker?

You will continue to keep your key worker at the The Dudley Group although you will also have a key worker at New Cross Hospital during your care there. The gynaecology specialist nurses at New Cross hospital are available on this number 01902 307999 ext. 5164 (8.30am to 4.30pm, Monday to Friday).

You can contact the nurses directly or you can leave an answerphone message.

There is also a Macmillan Cancer support information centre at New Cross hospital located on the main corridor (C1). You can visit or call the centre for information and support. The centre is open 10-4pm and on 01902 695234.

How do I get there?

The Gynaecology Outpatient Department is situated in the Women's and Children's Unit (maternity block), zone D location D18. This is at the south end of the hospital. Please see the maps on pages 4 and 5 for more information.

You can get to the Gynaecology Outpatient Department through a separate entrance located to the right of the maternity block as you look at it.
