

When someone dies

Information and advice
following your bereavement

Please accept our condolences at this sad time.

This bereavement booklet has been developed to assist families and friends after a death.

It is split into two parts. The first part covers the practical matters that need to be sorted out when someone dies, and who is responsible for making sure these are dealt with. The second part addresses coping as time goes on, considering the effects of grief and loss, as well as providing information about available support. We encourage you to use it as a reference guide.

The days following a bereavement are very difficult. Unfortunately it is a period during which a number of matters must be dealt with. There are many decisions and arrangements that need to be made and dealing with the practicalities can feel overwhelming. All of this can be confusing and we hope this booklet will assist you during this time. You might find it helpful to seek support from someone else, like a family member, or someone outside the family whom you trust.

Loss is a deeply personal experience and we know that everyone has individual preferences. Therefore, it is important that you feel able to express your wishes, and seek support and advice so that we, and other people that support you, can best meet your needs. If you need additional help, please ask for it. There is a list of key useful contact numbers on page 4.

The information within this booklet is correct at time of printing, however if you notice anything that has changed please contact the Bereavement Office on

Care after death

After your loved one dies, they will be cared for by staff at the hospital just as carefully and respectfully as when he or she was alive, and in accordance with his or her religious beliefs.

Viewing Arrangements

When a death has occurred within the hospital, you can either see your relative, friend or loved one at the hospital or you may wish to wait until they are transferred to the funeral directors.

The viewing room in the bereavement suite is open Monday to Friday from 9:30am to 4.00pm. Viewings are by appointment only by calling 01384 244198.

If you would like to see your loved one outside of these hours, please contact the ward or department where the death occurred and they will do their best to make the necessary arrangements.

Contacting a funeral director

You can begin to make funeral arrangements as soon as you feel ready to do so. You do not have to wait until you have the Medical Certificate of Cause of Death or have registered the death. Booking a specific date and time for the funeral may not be possible if the Coroner is involved.

Your funeral director will help you decide what is right for you so that you are able to pay your last respects and say your farewell in a way which feels right. They will be able to consider and advise you on any particular request and preferences you may have.

The Dudley Medical Examiners Service

In line with current Government guidelines, all patients who die in hospital will have their treatment and stay reviewed by the Medical Examiners service. This process will involve a Medical Examiner reviewing the patient's records and speaking to Doctors and Consultants who have looked after the patient before they have died. The process should not add any more time before the Medical Certificate of Cause of Death is issued.

When the review is complete, the next of kin will receive a call, usually from a Medical Examiners Officer, who will explain the cause of death and offer advice as to the next stages to take. You will also be given the chance to speak about the patient's time in hospital and ask any questions you may have. The Medical Examiners service will provide an opportunity to raise any concerns you may have, and if necessary, direct you to PALs or other services who may be able to help.

Medical Certificate of Cause of Death

The MCCD is a legal document issued by a doctor who knows the cause of death and was involved in the care of the deceased. This can mean sometimes an unavoidable wait for the certificate, for example; if the relevant doctor concerned is not on duty for whatever reason. If the doctor has needed to get approval of a cause of death from the Coroner, this can also cause a delay. Until the cause of death is approved by the Coroner the doctor will not have permission to issue it.

If a death has occurred in the hospital, a member of the Medical Examiner's office will contact you when the cause of death has been established within 24 - 48hrs, and also to discuss the registration process.

Families need to be aware this will take longer after a weekend or a Bank holiday.

Registration of death

Deaths should be registered within five days.

Arranging an appointment

The Registrar will contact the next of kin to arrange an appointment to register the death once they have received the Medical Certificate of Cause of Death (MCCD).

However, if you have any concerns, please call Council Plus on 0300 555 2345.

The telephone line can be very busy and you may wait in a queue before speaking to the correct person. In this instance, there is an option to send an email direct to the Registrar's office (register.office@dudley.gov.uk). It is essential that you leave a contact name and number so that they can respond to your message as soon as they can.

Your appointment

It would be helpful if you can take along the following information if possible:

- The birth certificate of the person who has died.
- Marriage/civil partnership certificates if relevant.
- The deceased persons NHS number or medical card of the person who has died if you have it.

The Medical Cause of Death Certificate is a legal document issued by a doctor who knows the cause of death and was involved in the care of the deceased. Sometimes there is an unavoidable wait for the certificate, if for example the doctor concerned is not on duty. If the doctor has needed to get approval of a cause of death from the Coroner, this can also cause a delay. Until the cause of death is approved by the Coroner the doctor will not have permission to issue it, and the 5 day registration time period is not applicable.

The Registrar will need the following information:

- The date and place of death.
- The date and place of birth.
- The full names and any other names used of the person who has died (and maiden surname if this applies).
- Their occupation.
- The usual address of the person who has died.
- Whether the deceased was in receipt of a pension or allowance from public funds.
- The full names of his/her husband/wife/civil partner and their occupation.
- If the deceased was married or in a civil partnership, the date of birth of the surviving spouse or civil partner.

The Registrar will give you:

A certificate for burial or cremation (known as the Green Form). This is for you to take to the funeral director so that the funeral can take place.

A certificate of registration of death (form BD8). This is for social security purposes only.

Certified copies of the death certificate. You may also need to purchase copies of the death certificate. A death certificate is a certified entry of death in the register. You may need these for banks, building societies, solicitors or for pension/insurance claims. The register office will be able to advise on the possible number of copies required, but there will be a charge for each copy. Please take a debit/credit card to your appointment.

Please be aware there is a fee for any death certificates issued.

Organ and tissue donation

Tissue donation can dramatically improve the quality of life for some individuals who are desperately in need. Most people can donate some tissue for transplant. Age and medical condition are not necessarily a barrier to donation.

Tissue donation is possible if your relative or friend has died within the last 24 hours. Our aim is to support the individual's wishes to be a tissue donor following death. They may have expressed a wish during their lifetime by joining the Organ Donor Register, carrying a donor card or have stated a desire to help others following their death.

There is a national number available 24 hours a day for advice:

0300 123 2323

Personal property

When someone dies in a place other than their own home there may be personal effects and property to be collected. There may also be equipment to be returned from the family home.

Collecting personal belongings can be a difficult experience. You may choose to take everything with you before you leave or to collect them at another time. Any items left on the ward are passed on to the Bereavement Team who will hand them to your chosen Funeral Director. Alternatively, the belongings can be collected directly from the Bereavement Office by appointment only. To book an appointment please call 01384 244198. Please bring photo identification of the individual collecting any personal property.

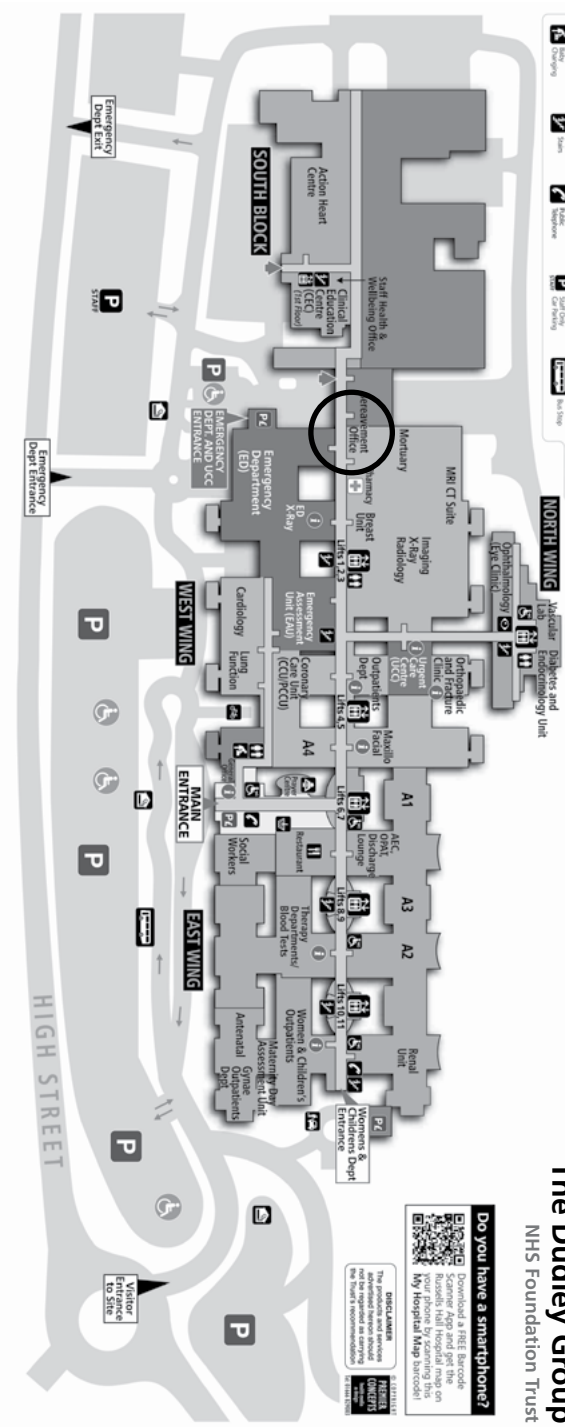

If your relative or friend died at home, you may wish to remove any personal property or valuables before the undertakers arrive.

The District Nurse Team will arrange for the removal of any medical equipment and will also be able to advise you about the safe return of unused medications to the local chemist. Removal of other equipment, and large items such as wheelchairs and bathing aids can also be arranged by the District Nurse Team or the Council. Alternatively, they may give you a telephone number for you to arrange this when it is convenient.

The Coroner

Black Country Coroner's Office Tel: 0121 569 7200

Under certain circumstances it is a legal requirement to inform the Coroner of a death. For example:

- If no precise cause of death can be established.
- If it follows an operation, or if it is possible that it could be due to a complication of surgery or anaesthetic.
- If it is not thought to be from natural causes.
- If it is due to an injury or a fall, however it happened, or if an accident or negligence is alleged.

When a death is reported to the Coroner's office, the Coroner will decide if a doctor can issue the death certificate (from either the hospital or community/GP practice depending on the place of death) or whether there will have to be a post mortem.

You will be contacted by a Coroner's liaison officer or family liaison officer who will support you throughout the time of the Coroner's involvement.

Coroner's post mortem

The Coroner may order a digital autopsy (full body scan) or a post mortem examination to determine the exact cause of death. The post mortem is usually carried out within the hospital.

If the Coroner orders a post mortem examination, it becomes a legal obligation. Therefore permission from relatives or the next-of-kin is not needed.

Once the results of the examination are known, if an inquest is not required, a certificate to register the cause of death will be issued by the Coroner's office.

Hospital post mortem

Hospital post mortems are not needed by law but may be requested by doctors or the next-of-kin when they need more information regarding the death. This can help families and doctors understand the cause of death and may help others with a similar illness in the future.

The doctors have to ask your permission to perform a hospital post mortem and you will be asked to sign a consent form, if you agree. Tissue and blood samples may be taken if it is an unexpected death. You can request that these are returned to you and we would recommend you discuss this with the Coroner as appropriate.

Who do I need to tell?

Tell Us Once

Tell Us Once is a free service offered by the Dudley Registration Service at any death registration appointment. It means you simply 'tell us once' and the service will, on your behalf, notify some of the government organisations that need to know. This will ease your burden and greatly reduce the amount of time you need to spend contacting organisations about the death.

This service will provide the relevant information to the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP), who will pass that information onto the people who need to know. We really would urge you to take the opportunity to use the service, which will make things so much simpler and easier for you.

If you decide to use the Tell Us Once service we can tell the following departments and organisations of the death, on your behalf:

Council services

- Council housing
- Housing and council tax benefit
- Council tax
- Blue badges (cancelled if badge brought to the department)
- Adult social care (including attendance allowance)
- Children's services
- Collection of payments for council services
- Electoral services

Government organisations

- Department for Work and Pensions
 - The pension, disability and carer's service.
 - Jobcentre Plus (please bring the deceased's national insurance number).
- HM Revenue and Customs
 - Child benefit.
 - Child tax credit and working tax credit.
 - Personal taxation.
- Identity and Passport Service
 - Passport cancellation (only if passport brought to appointment).
- Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency
 - Driving licence cancellation (only if licence brought to appointment).
- Ministry of Defence, Service Personnel and Veterans Agency
 - War pensions scheme.

The Tell Us Once appointment

Using the Tell Us Once service when registering a death takes slightly longer; but is well worth using. The information you provide will be treated securely and confidentially. It will be used to update benefits, credits or to help start up services. You will need to bring along:

- Details of any benefits or services the deceased was receiving.
- The deceased's driving licence or driving licence number.
- The deceased's passport or passport number and town and country of birth.
- The name, address and telephone number of the next-of-kin (closest relative by blood or marriage to the deceased), as well as their national insurance number and/or date of birth (the entitlement of the next-of-kin to benefits may change as a consequence of the death).
- The national insurance number of any surviving spouse or partner.
- The name and address of the person dealing with the estate (if different).
- The verbal permissions of the last three people listed above must be obtained before you provide us with this information about them.

At the end of the appointment, you will be provided with a unique reference number and a list of all organisations and departments being notified on your behalf. If you have any future queries, you should contact Dudley Council Plus on 0300 555 2345.

Stopping Junk Mail to the recently deceased

If someone you know has died, the amount of unwanted marketing post being sent to them can be greatly reduced which helps to stop painful daily reminders.

By registering with the free service www.stopmail.co.uk the names and addresses of the deceased are removed from mailing lists, stopping most advertising mail within as little as six weeks. If you cannot access the internet you can call 0808 168 9607, where you will be asked for very simple information that will take only a few minutes to complete. Alternatively, ask the bereavement team for a leaflet that can be returned in the post.

This free of charge service provided by the Bereavement Support Network will actively reduce the unwanted marketing mail but also can help reduce the likelihood of identity theft following the death of someone close. The information is not used for any other purpose and you only have to complete this once. Additionally to Stop Mail a comparable service can also be accessed from the Bereavement Register or Deceased Preference Service if you would prefer to use them.

Arranging the funeral

The funeral

Before you begin to arrange the funeral, it is worth thinking about a few points. This may include whether the person who has died had any preferences about what they wanted their funeral to be like, and what sort of funeral you, and other family and friends may want.

When can I start to arrange the funeral?

You can begin to make funeral arrangements as soon as you feel ready to do so. You do not have to wait until you have the Medical Certificate of Cause of Death issued by a doctor, or registered the death.

Contact can be made with the Funeral Director to discuss any wishes or preferences. However, it is advised not to book a specific date or time for the funeral until the relevant paperwork has been issued.

How do I find a funeral director?

Most funeral directors belong to the National Association of Funeral Directors (NAFD) and/or the National Society of Allied and Independent Funeral Directors (SAIF).

These associations have their own codes of practice that must be followed to ensure consistent levels of service and standards.

Funeral costs

Funerals are expensive although basic costs tend to be similar. However, the final cost can vary considerably. Do not be afraid to mention your budget or obtain estimates from several undertakers.

The Citizens Advice Bureau and Age UK can provide some helpful advice and information about funeral costs. Their contact details are included from page 31 of this booklet.

Financial help may be available if you receive benefits or if the person who has died has no next-of-kin. Contact the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) before making any arrangements.

Telephone: 0800 731 0469

www.gov.uk/browse/births-deaths-marriages/death

Burials abroad

If the person is to be buried in a country other than England or Wales, a funeral director will be able to assist you with this. When you register the death, you will need to obtain at least two certified copies of the death certificate (some consulates and embassies require more). You need to give the copies to your funeral director who will then obtain an 'Out of England Certificate'. Information for weekends/bank holidays will also be given in order to make the normal process quicker.

Probate

Probate is the legal authority to administer the estate. A Grant of Probate is an order of the Court giving one or more people the legal authority to administer the estate of the deceased in order to distribute it correctly to the beneficiaries.

You should try to find out if the deceased had made a will and whether it is held by their solicitor. This may contain information regarding the deceased's wishes for the funeral. It will also enclose the names of the executors or persons legally entitled to deal with the deceased's estate.

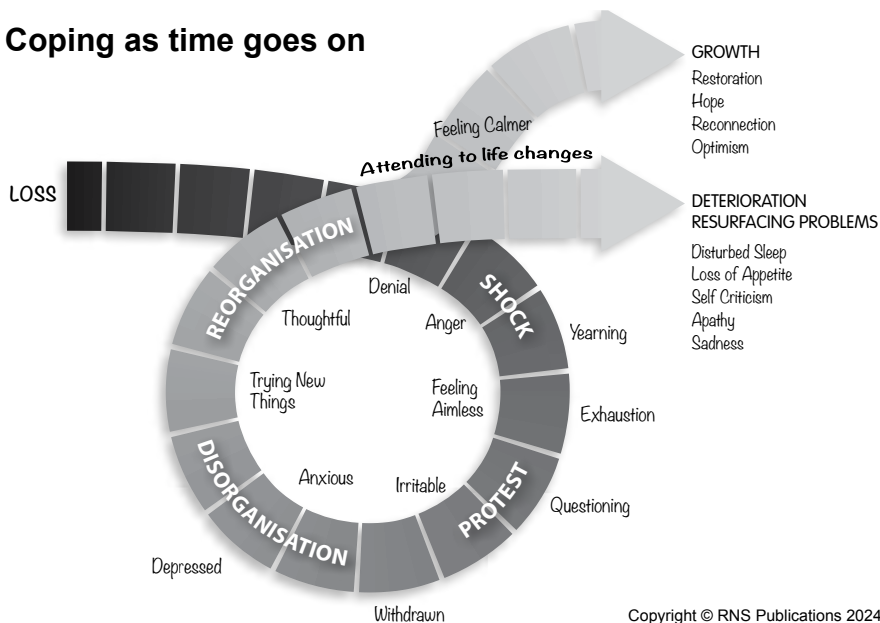

Your solicitor will assist you with the administration of the estate and any questions relating to taxation that may arise, for further information:

Coping with a death

Coping as time goes on

For many, healing is not a case of 'moving on' from grief, but instead growing around it.

The experience of grief

This diagram is intended to demonstrate that there is no set pattern or experience of grief. Maybe you will recognise and identify with some of this in your experiences and know that others have felt something similar. Moving towards a sense of recovery where you learn to live with your relative/friend's death can sometimes feel like finding a 'new normal'.

Grief knocks you off balance. You may find yourself having to cope with a world which feels very different as you go through a process of mourning.

Grief is a painful process. Everyone is different but there are some common experiences such as:

- Anxiety.
- Vivid memories.
- Problems with sleeping.
- Feeling of sadness and longing.
- Mood swings.
- Feelings of anger.
- Feelings of guilt or shame.
- Changing personality/behaviour.
- Difficulty in caring for others.
- Work difficulties.

In the initial shock of a loss, people can feel a sense of numbness and disbelief. You may feel detached and separate from others you love, even if they are physically close. Life can feel very chaotic. You may not feel anything at all.

Alongside the deep pain and sadness, you may feel agitated and angry about what has happened, and you may even feel anger towards the person who had died. This can result in feelings of guilt and further detachment.

You may think that you are going mad, that things do not make sense, you cannot concentrate. You may struggle to organise things as you have done before.

Over time these agitated feelings may shift to deep fatigue, depression and exhaustion and then move towards a position of reflection, feeling calmer and better able to try new things.

You may fear forgetting or remembering wrongly, and this can and does happen. Trust there will always be a part of them in your life.

As part of the cycle of any loss, in times of pain and weakness, it is not unusual for old feelings to resurface (or memories of earlier losses) and to feel that things are deteriorating emotionally. This may take you back through things you may feel you have already overcome. Trust in your own resources, get plenty of rest and use the support available to you; family, friends and more formal support agencies (contact details from page 31 of this booklet).

In grief you will experience different kinds of coping and shift back and forth between these two approaches. It's okay to experience grief in doses. At times you will face your loss head-on, and others you'll focus on fulfilling practical needs and life tasks, and once in a while you will need to take a break and find respite.

“The Mourner’s Bill of Rights” by Alan Wolfelt (2007)

1. You have the right to experience your own unique grief.
2. You have the right to talk about your grief.
3. You have the right to feel a multitude of emotions.
4. You have the right to be tolerant of your physical and emotional limits.
5. You have the right to experience ‘griefbursts’.
6. You have the right to make use of ritual.
7. You have the right to embrace your spirituality.
8. You have the right to search for meaning.
9. You have the right to treasure your memories.
10. You have the right to move toward your grief and heal.

What may help during this time?

There are some fundamental things you can do to help yourself in regard to your overall wellbeing:

- Don't be rushed by the expectations of others. There are no rules.
- Try not to hurry the healing process, take it at your own pace.
- Do try to look after yourself. Get plenty of rest. Try spending a little time with others.
- Ask for help and support from family, friends or a support group.
- Do talk about the person who has died to people who understand.
- Ask for help.

The following website provides some very useful information:
www.nhs.uk

The NHS choices website is an excellent source of information for the range of emotional concerns and challenges which are common in bereavement. As well as information on grief and bereavement, there is an excellent Moodzone section which has a self assessment tool, as well as valuable information on improving your wellbeing.

If you don't have a computer or feel confident using the internet, local libraries can help you access this information.

lets-get.com/healthy-lifestyles/mental-wellbeing/five-ways-wellbeing

The 'Five ways to wellbeing' have been identified through extensive reviews of research and expert opinion as simple actions that anyone can take that will have a positive impact on their day to day wellbeing.

Small changes can make a big difference. Building just five actions into our daily lives can increase wellbeing.

This is all about taking action to make change – the more you put in, the more you are likely to get out. Planning and preparation is key, so remember to use a diary to schedule planned activities and involve your friends and family. Positive mental wellbeing does not mean that you never experience feelings or situations that you find difficult but it does mean that you feel you have the resilience to cope when times are tougher than usual.

Finally, know that you will not always feel as bad as you do now. Getting through each day after a death may feel like a challenge, but by focusing more and more on today and less on yesterday you will make progress. The landscape of your life may have changed dramatically but the changes will slowly start to feel more bearable.

Seeking help

If you are struggling with grief or simply finding it really hard, there are a number of organisations that can help.

It is a good idea to speak with your GP or someone who can help you get the care you need.

We have included a list of local and national support organisations used to supporting people in bereavement.

Support is available, if you don't find the support that suits you, keep asking and looking.

Talking to children about death and grief

Include them as much as you can, tell them as much as you can, reassure them as much as you can.

Evidence tells us that the best support a child can get in grief is seeing the adults around them grieving. Like adults, they too find it hard to understand and cope if they are not told what is happening. When information is kept from children, sometimes their imagination can make the situation far more frightening as they seek to make sense of what is happening around them. It can lead to them feeling isolated and excluded.

- Use simple language when talking with them.
- Give them time and the opportunity to ask questions.
- Give them plenty of love and reassurance.
- Share your own emotions, this helps children to learn that it is okay and healthy to express emotions.
- Give children the space and opportunity to draw, write stories, and express themselves as they wish in order to say goodbye to the person who has died.
- Offer children the opportunity to participate in the funeral if they wish to, and you feel comfortable with that.

It is a good idea to speak to the school or college that your child attends so that they can also offer support. Talk to your child about this.

Finally, if you are worried, that's the time to seek help. Arrange an appointment and talk through your concerns with your GP.

Support organisations

We have listed several organisations used to dealing with bereavement. It is sometimes easier to talk to a stranger on the telephone about the way you feel rather than someone that is close to you.

CELEBRANT

Saying goodbye to your loved one is such an important moment. As your Celebrant, I will work passionately to ensure that together we create a wonderful final farewell.

Funeral Celebrant

Whilst helping you every step of the way with integrity and experience, my services are written to reflect your requirements and the personality of your loved one. The service can be either a celebration of life, traditional, contain an element of religion or without religious content. Either way it will be conducted with care and compassion.

Choose a cremation, burial, natural burial or memorial and I will be there to help, support and guide you.

Do you need help with Probate?

Some people decide to administer the estate by themselves but this can take a significant amount of time and effort, especially if you've never had to go through the process before. If you decide to undertake the work yourself, you should also be aware that you are personally liable for any mistakes made during the process, such as when completing tax returns and legal paperwork. For these reasons, many people prefer to appoint a specialist legal firm to do the work on their behalf.

Complex situation? We can handle it.

We've helped thousands of families receive their inheritance from estates both big and small. Our specialist legal team can advise on any situation. Estate administration is what we do, every day, for families in all sorts of circumstances.
